THE RED CROSS.

The Red Cross Society in town is entering upon the second year of its career as an independent society. For the past year it has a good record to its credit, but its members are anxious to do just double this year. This will mean twice as much to collect and twice as much work to turn out.

When it is remembered that Canada has twice as many soldiers at the front now than she had a year ago, with an equally increased number in hospitals and convalescent homes, it can be readily understood why there is need for this increased production in Red Cross circles.

And when we think of the vast improvement in conditions this year-over last we feel the society should have little trouble in having the wish fulfilled.

The townspeople have done exceptionally well in this line in the past. Workmen in our industries have donated liberally, as the financial statement in this issue will show. But in order to assure the doubling of the work this year we think it would be quite in order to ask for some assistance from the farmers of the surrounding country. No line of business has enjoyed such a degree of prosperity as has the farmers. Providence has blessed them with a good crop and the war has made their products a good price.

We feel sure that all that is necessary to get the doubling is to bring the matter to their attention.

THE SUBMARINE.

The sinking of six vessels along the Atlantic coast by a German submarine brings the war home almost to our very doors.

Naturally some will ask: "What is the United States going to do about it?" since the deed was done off our shores. From reports to hand so far, however, it would appear there is very little they can do. The submarine was outside the three mile limit and had apparently not violated international law at least so far as the United States is concerned unless it be as was stated by the captain of one of the boats sunk, "that his boat was torpedoed without warning."

In war time we must expect some such catastrophes as this to go against us but we do not think this one should be cause for much worry. It will only be a matter of time till the U.S. will share this fate as scores of her sister boats.

At present, so far as the United States is concerned, their only concern may be international law, but if the under water craft were to attempt more drastic blockade of the Atlantic coast, it might be a case of national existence with them, as the bulk of their trade now is with the allied nations. This fact gives us additional assurance that we have little to fear in the way of any serious submarine blockade on the Atlantic coast.

It will be a great relief to many in town—especially the women—to know that the council has decided to put on a night policeman, as suggested in the Review a few weeks ago.

PRAIRIE FIRES.

In all sections of the province the past season has produced a very luxuriant growth of vegetation which, as usual, will shortly become inflammable. In the interests of the preservation of life and property from destruction by prairie and forest fires, it is important that every person take all necessary precautions to prevent fires from running at large.

Fires in the fall of the year have invariably caused more damage than at any other season. This being the case the Review would remind its readers not only of the great damage done by the careless setting and care of fires, but also of the penalties imposed upon those found guilty of carelessness along this line. In this regard the act says:

"Any person who shall either directly or indirectly, personally or through any servant, employee or agent—

Kindle a fire and let it run at large on any land not his own property; his own land, or allow any fire under his charge, custody or control or under the charge, custody or control of any servant, employee or agent to run at large, shall be guilty of an offence and shall, on summary conviction thereof be liable to a penalty of not less than $25 and not more than $200, and in addition to such penalty shall be liable to civil action for damages."

After a careful study of the situation J. W. McMillan, D. D., asserts on reliable authority that 42 per cent of the deaths occurring annually in Canada could be prevented. He says that "Canada has 44,100 needless deaths every year. This is an alarming state of affairs, and only goes to prove the necessity for some improvement in our present systems. As there is no doubt that this needless waste of life is caused first from lack of knowledge in how to treat certain diseases, and secondly because many have not the means to secure the proper treatment, it goes to show that government controlled free hospitals are advocated in these columns some time ago are among our greatest needs at present.

In reviewing the wheat situation a few weeks ago the Review spoke of the possibility of government control of food stuffs as a possible means of keeping down prices. It now appears evident that the British government is going to exert control of all wheat imports with the right to commandeer at its pleasure. This will mean that there will be no more opportunity in Great Britain for the speculator to exploit the public on the prices of a very necessary product in the food bill of fare.

The casualty lists published this last few days show that Alberta boys have been well to the front in the recent heavy fighting. They show that this province is doing her "bit" but when we think of that bit mean the loss of so many of our best and bravest the war is brought home to us with all its terrible-ness. The fact that none of our own Redcliff boys are mentioned in the last long list, is the silver lining on the heavy cloud which now hangs over the province.

At the convention of the Episcopal church of the United States a committee has recommended certain changes in the church of the day. Among others they suggest leaving the word "obey" out of the bride's obligation in the marriage ceremony. Evidently the members of the committee were married men.

who are convinced that it is useless to have laws that will not or cannot be carried out.

A trip through the rural districts of this province will show that Alberta, certainly is doing its bit to help keep the bread basket of the Empire well filled. Thrashing outfits and busy farmers marking this year's crop for the market while the plow and harrows are busy preparing the land for next year. With a continuance of the present favorable weather there will surely be a larger area under cultivation next year.

Sometimes we feel that people who lose articles don't deserve to find them. They never seem to think of advertising for them and if it were not that the finder drops around to the newspaper to advertise his find the losers never would get them.

HUN PLOT DISCOVERED.

"An investigation made at the German legation," says an official statement issued recently, "led to the discovery of numerous cases of toleration of the German legation in the garden of the legation, and of flags labelled 'vires' which was intended to propagate simultaneously an epidemic among mice and horses."

"A representative of the United States legation witnessed the discovery. This new criminal German manoeuvre reveals preparations similar to those made in other countries, the Germans are unable to use their high explosives against works of art, as they were surprised by Roumania's entry into the war and by the surveillance of the secret police."

JOHN BULL IN ACTION

Editor Gets Wrath Over Killing With Eggplant

Here if one interesting week's experience of Horatio Bottomley, the famous editor of John Bull, is narrated by himself: To rush down to the shore of a bloody, take a vigorous swim in an exciting bath—then get snored up for ten hours on the railway. As a result, for the day, cut off from all postal, telegraph and telephone communications—their address a huge meeting on the East Coast with Keppel and other war leaders from the local "bazzars," to some "Pashington Billings," to some "hypothesize the afflicted audience, take philosophic and grim calm; afterwards, by special leave of the authorities, to spend, with him, along the roads and lanes leading to the town, and through the dim sunlight watch the world's gallery of pacifistic women and children—many in their night dresses—driven from the terror of the skies; and then, in consequence, to, at again hold all night on the railway, and then, some other or other, to get through our journalistic and other work—surely (to bring this journalistic sentence to a close) with an interesting week's experience. And we shall never forget "22-33" which he had upon those huddled masses of shivering, many-films miles clinging to their mothers, their women and girls, passing promiscuously full of wonder, the little ones, old men and women, and many cripples, struggling along with terror-stricken faces. "Great God," he exclaimed, "and they tell us that these raids are a demand of military value! What wouldn't I give to get Trenchard here tonight! I am glad I was able to keep my promise to come with you to an East Coast town where they know what Zeppelins mean. Yes, I am glad I have seen this. Look at them, poor devils, and we are told that all is well with the Air Service!"

USE PIGEONS STILL

Aviators Have Not Entirely Supplanted the Homing Birds

The announcement of the War Office that a large number of homing pigeons are being utilized for naval and military purposes, and that many of these have been shot at and killed or wounded when homing to their lofts by German people, calls attention to the value of the work of these winged messengers. They are referred to by the War Office as, in the majority of cases, being sent to the government by a large number of patriotic pigeon fanciers. Wireless, aeroplanes, and balloons have supplanted the use of pigeons for various war purposes on the continent, and the British Admiralty, which up to a point has been in the habit of sending a lot in the north of England, discontinued it on account of the introduction of wireless.

Pigeons have been found rather useful for certain kind of work, and it is well known in east coast shipping circles that the British fleet in the North Sea found painters of trained homing pigeons on board transporters at an early period in the war. These pigeons are able to fly tremendous distances in an incredibly short period of time.

Rabbi Held Crucifix

No more "beautiful and more touching" of the war has been made public than the following, described in a private letter from the front: "Rabbi Abraham Bink was fatally wounded at Salonika by a fragment of a shell at the moment when he was carrying a crucifix to a wounded soldier who had taken him for a Catholic priest."

ON QUICK THINKIN'

If you have a place along the track of Trench you'll find it as good a lot of his and his wife's things that you might of done and didn't 'cause the other fellow 'd 'em while you was in it. I'm a little better than you ain't that's right. Nobody smokes it.

makes me mad to think of the real, mercenary-minded, unenterprising snags that's been enabled, right from under my nose just 'cause I didn't think as fast nor eat as fast as 'tother fellow; and if I had it all to do over again I'd work things out on a different schedule. This slow and sure stuff is all right for a copybook motto, but by Jove it's a poor one for a live wit. What ye think yourself?

That Settled It

There was once an old Irishman who would invest his last cent in any kind of a gamble he happened upon against. One Christmas Eve he came home with a ticket entitling him to a chance on a horse and under that were to be raffled off.

"We'll be drivin' out through the park to-morrow, like the big gun, Mary," he announced with pride to his wife.

"Oh, pop, won't that be fine!" chimed in his little son. "You an' me can ride on the front seat, an' the mom and little 'oluns can sit in the back!"

"Yet be after doin' no such thing!" asserted the old man. "Twice be the mother will be on the front side with me."

"I will," winced the youngster. "I will be 'idin' on the front."

Then the old man assumed a paternal air, and took his pipe from his mouth to deliver his final decision to him. "I tell ye," he said with emphasis, "I'll be havin' no back talk from ye. I tell ye that. Off of the steech, at once, ye spalpeen."

STUDY CAREFULLY.

The situation in Macedonia is very serious. The Greek army has been driven back to its original position at several points.

Lee Serbia are reported to have crossed the Corra in force, while day on the enemy have appeared in Macedonia on the northern bank of the river—the British proper. The Serbians are satisfactory—an official issued at Paris says Hungarians are fighting against the British. The Bulgarians are in retreat in this region.

The total British casualties on all fronts for the week had ended are announced by the war office to have been 22,000 of all ranks, killed wounded and missing. Of these 1,200 are officers, of whom 301 were killed. Of the men 4,401 were killed of a total of 21,500. The total of officers and men killed is 4,812.

German casualties from the beginning of the war to the end of September were 4,500,000, according to an official British compilation.

FEATS OF CANADIANS

Artillery Officer's Rule—Patsi Fought to Last

General E. W. B. Morrison, of Ottawa, former editor of the Ottawa Citizen, and later in command of one of the artillery brigades at the front, has written to Mrs. Morrison of the Ottawa Citizen, as follows: "After our troops retook the ground that had been temporarily lost, I was ordered to take the position of a battery of the 1st Canadian Trench Battalion, and I was the only Canadian officer to be killed. Around them lay the bodies of twelve Germans killed by the battery; but they had been dead."

"The Germans showed more decency than on former occasions, notably not firing on stretcher-bearers. One of our men was wounded and captured, and the Wurmbergers gave him a cup of coffee, and said to him, 'Here you are, old man, you'll be over England in a few days.' This probably added to the valour of our men in the attack. The Germans also tried to circulate regarding the arrival of the Germans, but the Canadian watched his chance and slipped in the back and away from his captors. He was caught by the Germans, but again escaped, and returned safely to his lines."

"A young Ottawa boy named Bruce Hill, who came out as gunner and had since got a commission, distinguished himself by remaining in his forward observation position after the Germans had charged past, and kept up communication by telephone with his battery for several hours. The wire was cut by shells. He waited until dark, and made his way back, carrying his telephone instruments with him."

CANADA WASTES BREAD

Lessons of Thrift Must be Taught, But How?

A Canadian woman writes: Two pictures came to my mind. One was that published in the daily papers showing blockade conditions as they exist in Berlin. A scene in the street market where bread is sold under ration tickets by the German Government, each purchaser being compelled to produce his bread ticket before he can buy. The other is a mental picture deep in mind's eye. I looked from the balcony of a friend's apartment the other day into the alley below. Here were strown great chunks of stale bread, the refuse from some one's garbage tin. How typical this waste of bread. What are we to do that we may educate these naturally wasteful individuals? There is no excuse for the waste of a crumb of bread. The thrifty housewife knows a thousand ways that stale bread may be utilized. She who knows no more of domestic economies than that she will permit the throwing out of stale bread, must be taught the principles of domestic economy.

BATTALION OF INDIANS

Ojibwas and Troops Bordered Hatchet in 14th Militiamen

Lieut. Cooke of the Indian Department, Ottawa, recruiting among the Indian Reserves, found that the old feud between the Ojibwas and the Troops had gone. They are ready and willing to fight alongside one another in defence of Canada and the Empire. The hatchet has been buried deep. An effort was made to form a complete Indian battalion and have picked them up for several regiments. However, the most of the Indian volunteers gathered together at Cayuga, Ont., trained with the 14th Battalion. The movement to have an Indian battalion started with the Hamilton News, an old and highly thought of Indian regiment. That battalion established a detail on Manitoulin Island, where they received amongst the Ojibwas of the island and along the north shore.

HOW THE MILL GIRLS ARE "DOING THEIR BIT"

English Factory Girls Sitting on a Campsite, Waiting for the Cause

Some of the Lancashire mill girls of this time of war, for many factory owners have been running their mills at a loss and have been forced to shut them, instead of full time. Nevertheless, these hard working women spend their day amid the noise and noise of machinery, have thereby all contributed a very useful share of help to their country.

In one district alone there are large small houses kept up entirely by these mill girls for the benefit of some poor Belgian refugees. Rent, coal, light and food are all paid for out of funds which have been subscribed by the women workers of a certain mill. Others with no so large a body of workers, may only keep one house, but it would be impossible to enter the single Lancashire town where the factory girls are not doing a "very big bit" to ease the suffering of people who have come to the country for protection.

Can Deal With Unemployables

Sometimes we hear complaints of the Balmes and marbles are not all we could desire, but it is wrong to condemn the bulk for the fallings in certain cases. The girls in the cotton land are quite capable of dealing with unemployables. A case in point is that of a refugee couple who were housed and taken care of by the Mill Girls' Society. One of the kindesses—a girl well known for her kindness of heart—was returning rather late at night from visiting a sick friend worker, when she noticed a light in the Belgians' house.

Unhappily, she turned the handle and went in—the lack of ceremony is characteristic of Lancashire people—and was surprised to find the wife sobbing and with her face tied up. It appeared her husband had been coming home drunk several nights and the previous evening he had hit treated her severely. The two women were talking when he rolled in—certainly the worst, for drink.

"That's her bad door shut on the lid. That's not how to try such tricks on one. Let the mill girls to be told that they did matter to him if she did shut the door. He'd sleep in a trench and he'd as soon sleep in the streets as anywhere."

Bread Upon the Waters

To prove the truth of the Biblical quotation "cast thy bread upon the waters," an interesting little tale is worth relating. A mill worker, who was a widow with two or three children to support, took in a Belgian girl to lodge with her and help her expenses. "The girl was thrown out of work, and did not seem able to get any fresh plain. Nearly a month went by, and the girl paid nothing for board and lodgings.

"But a fool, Tolly Elizabeth, keep! you have for now. Just the tell her she must clear or pay up," said her co-workers said, but she wouldn't do it.

Two days after that remark was made to her the widow was taken seriously ill, and could not be moved from her home. That Belgian girl nursed her and attended to her two little ones, as though she had been a dear relation. Nothing could exceed her kindness, and when someone offered her some actual sympathy, she declared that nothing she could do would make up for the kindness of this mill worker landlady.

Schoolwork at Home

There are endless opportunities for carrying on the work of the school in the home, without its being felt by the children that they can never get away from lessons. The boys performing their experiments in the attic are not under any compulsion to take their recreation in that particular way. They are just having a good time, and when the visitor has been got rid of, if their mother would join them, she would be satisfactorily interested and impressed by their performances.

"What's the price?" she asked.

"Oh," she gasped, hurriedly taking the shoe off, "three and a half dollars as much as ever I can go to!"

"May I just try it on again, madam, to see you like it? Ah, yes, the shape of your foot shows no advantage in this shoe, and it is a size smaller than the one you are wearing. That is the only fault with our five dollar shoes—their fitting is so accurate that the shoes are consequently smaller."

"But," she protested feebly, "I didn't want to pay—"

"Quite so, madam. I will get down some of our $3.50 designs. See? This shoe is a three, so I shall need a four size in that price shoe."

Her color came and went for a moment, as she struggled with vanity.

"I think I'll have these $5 ones, after all," she said. "They are so comfortable!"

"The little sneak!" exclaimed the members of the family in unison.

To Canadian Prisoners

An order from the militia department at Ottawa has just been given out at the headquarters of Military District No. 18 regarding instructions as to how clothing might be sent to Canadian prisoners of war in Germany. These instructions read:

It might be stated that there is a committee of Canadians in London, Eng., who supply necessary clothing, etc., to Canadian prisoners of war in Germany. Relatives and friends of these prisoners should notify the number and name of the prisoner and the unit of the expeditionary force to which he belongs, together with the place of internment. All communications, which will receive prompt attention, should be addressed to Mrs. Rivers-Bulley, care of the Red Cross Society, 14-16 Cockspur street, London S. W."
